INTERPOL Washington, U.S. National Central Bureau

Software Architect
Matthew Louderback

Matthew Louderback serves as Software Architect in Border Security Division (BSD), INTERPOL Washington, the United States National Central Bureau (USNCB). Matt's duties include the design and development of all Project Terminus software solutions.

Prior to joining the BSD team, Mr. Louderback worked in the USNCB INTERPOL Washington connecting US agencies with INTERPOL databases.

Matt's prior experience include the design and development of many software applications across the government and commercial markets.

Matt's academic credentials include a Batchelor of Science in Computer Science.